Boss Platt's Trial at Albany Goes On To-Day.

He Voted in Owego, but Says He "Resides" in New York.

Tilts Between Lawyers in the Court-Room-Mr. Platt Tells How He Has Performed His Duties as Quarantine Commissioner-His Collars and Cuffs are Starched at Itts Old Home, but Mrs. Platt Settles the Bill-The Case May Go to Jury To-Night.

ISPECIAL TO THE WORLD, ALBANY, Jan. 11.-Ex-Attorney-General Dennis O'Brien, with associate counsel, coninued their inquiry to-day before Judge Mayham, of the Supreme Court, as to what right ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt has to the title of Quarantine Commissioner. .

As on the previous day, the trial-room was Additional witnesses were produced to rove that Mr. Platt is a legal resident of wego, Tioga County, N. Y., and, therefore, a usurper of the Commissionership he now walton A. Barker said he was Clerk of the town of Owego. The poll list showed that Mr. Platt had voted at elections in that town in 1880, 1881 1882, 1884, 1885 and 1886. He either neglected or declined to do so in 1887.

Mary Conlin, an Owego laundress, told how she polished up Mr. Platt's cuffs, collars and shirt bosoms. They were sent from New York once a week by express. Mrs. Platt's elothing was also sent in a trunk.

The witness, after cleaning the garments, returned them by express to the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York. Checks in payment were always signed by Mrs, and never Lawyer McFarland, after moving to dismiss the case, and that motion being denied, proceeded to address the jury for the defense.

Mr. McFarland insisted that the evidence thus far admitted had established beyond any question that Mr. Platt's real residence is in New York City. He had been regularly appointed Quarantine Commissioner by Gov. Cornell, and no question had been raised as to the legality of the appointment until the Governor and the Senate disagreed as to who should be his successor.

"It is nonsense to say that because Mr. Platt voted in Owego that was his residence. You might as well say that a man who votes in New York and passes a large part of his time in Montreal resides in New York. The very fact that Mr. Platt took up his residence in New York is conclusive evidence that he desired to comply with every provision of the law."

law."

Juror Clowrey insists to day that he knows who the President of the United States is, and Mr. McFarland expressed the hope that he would find it easy to overcome his political convictions.

Mr. McFarland read copious extracts from Webster's Dictionary to prove that the word "reside" meant a permanent dwelling-place, and insisted that Webster himself would have decided without hesitation that Mr. Platt had resided in New York City for the past eight years.

Platt had resided in New York City for the past eight years.

Mr. Platt himself, after Mr. McFarland had finished his speech, took the stand, and there was a craning of necks to get a good look at the boss.

The ex-Senator told how he had performed the duties of Quarantine Commissioner since 1880. Mr. Platt said he had lived in Owego until 1878. In February, 1890, he was appointed Quarantine Commissioner. He had seen in business here thirty years, and represented the district in Congress from 1873 to 1877.

"Until what time have you regarded Owego SH your permanent place of residence?"

asked Mr. Moak.

"I object!" shouted Mr. O'Brien. "You have no right to ask such a question."

A long controversy ensued over the right to put it. The Court finally decided to allow it, and Mr. Platt replied: "The fall of 1877. We then came to New York and went to board in West Twentieth street."

"Have you since 1877 ever had a fixed habitation in Owego?"

"No, sir. I have visited there many times and stopped at the Ahwaga House, but had no residence there."

Mr. Platt said further that he had been

Mr. Platt said further that he had been president of the United States Express Company since March, 1880. He had resided at the Fifth Avenue Hotel since the fall of 1880 continuously. He had visited Owego many times, Business interests required his presence there from time to time.

His examination had proceeded smoothly until Mr. Macfarland attempted to offer in evidence deeds of property owned by Mr. Platt in New York City. Gen. O'Brien objected and a provoking squabble ensued. The Court finally permitted the deeds to be submitted.

Gen. O'Brien objected to this question and another wrangle ensued.

Yet Attorney R. F. Tilney, for Mr. Arbuckle, could not say to-day whether the cass would be appealed or not, although he had had a tatk with his elient.

"What of the verdict? Was it just?" asked the reporter.

"That is a matter of opinion," laughed the lawyer. "Mr. Arbuckle made no comment, nor did he show any emotion about it. We have plenty of time—forty-five days—should we decide to appeal to the General Term."

Mr. Parsons only smiled on the reporter and said: "I never try my cases in the newspapers. Labould like to know if Miss. and said: "I never try my cases in the newspapers. LONDON, Jan. 11.—Here is an extract from spicy letter which John Ruskin writes to the Telegraph: "During the last thirty years we have ceased to be English. Formerly, swindling was not our method in trade, nor was advertising a necessity. Once we imported from America neither meat nor manners, and from France neither art or religion. Formerly our navy did not use torpedoes, nor did our army make use of rifles behind hedges."

lyn, came across a man lying on the sidewark in Spencer street, near Willoughby avenue, with blood streaming from his nostrils and mouth.

He summoned Policeman Kintz, who in turn called an ambulance. Before its arrival the man died. At the station-house his body was needthed as that of Thomas Tyrell, a newsdealer, of 181 Spencer street. No marks of violence were found on his person. He was a man much addicted to drinking. It is supposed that while intoxicated he fell down and died from the shock. Alcoholism is also attributed as the cause of death.

Knights Talk of Seceding.

It leaked out to-day that a meeting of leaders of various district assemblies of Knights of Labor lately held had for its object a speciation from the order. W. J. Whalen, of Shemandeah, was chairman of the committee, and J. H. Kurtz acted as spokesman.

Mr. Corbin received them smilingly, and was introduced by General Solicitor Koercher. President Keim, of the Coal and Iron Company, was also present.

Mr. Corbin stated that he would be glad to hear anything the gentlemen had to say.

Mr. Kurtz then read the resolution and spoke with some eloquence regarding the danger which threatened the business of Schuylkiil County and in fact all along the line of the road. He hoped that something could be done to check the trouble before it had gone too far. Already trade in the mining region was virtually paralyzed and there was no telling what might follow if the strike continued much longer.

Several other members of the committee spoke in a similar vein.

Mr. Corbin replied that he tully realized the importance of the statements which had been made. He had always believed in treating his men fairly, and he was willing to do what he could conscientiously do towards bringing the strike to a close. He declined, however, to commit himself in words, and when the delegation departed it was with a very hazy idea of what had been accomplished.

The committee will meet again this afternoon at Green's Hotel, and will return home by the 4 o'clock train.

SOCIETIES FOR WORKINGWOMEN.

The American Federation of Labor Interested in Organizing Them.

The American Federation of Labor ha taken up the cause of the poor workingwomen and girls of this city and its organ-women and girls of this city and its organizers will hold a series of mass-meetings for the purpose of agitating the subject and forming societies of the workingwomen and enlisting the sympathy and aid of the general public in their behalf.

The first of these meetings will be held next Friday evening in Clarendon Hall, under the auspices of Branch 9 of the Federation. Addresses on the subject of women's work and wages will be made by President Gompers of the Federation. Mrs. Leonard and others. Fred. Scharmann, proprietor of Clarendon Hall, has given the use of his larendon Hall, has given the use of his Clarendon Hall, has given the use of his place free of charge.

Working girls and women, no matter of what occupation, are earnestly requested by the committee in charge to attend the meeting and aid in the success of the movement. Should the attendance be good steps will be taken to organize all who desire to join. The initiation fee and dues will be put at very low figures so as to be within the means of all female workers.

TWO VICTORIES FOR WORKERS.

ligar-Makers Successful in Their Efforts to Prevent a Reduction of Wages.

Secretary Dampf, of Cigar-Makers' Union 144, said that no word had been received from President Strasser yet regarding the several applications for leave to strike, but be was hourly expecting telegrams from the International Union headquarters at Buffalo. As all the applications to strike are based on a reduction of prices, and the International nion is resisting such a move on the part of ie manufacturers, it is thought all the appli-

The forty men who went out of David Hirsch's Defiance eigar manufactory in East Forty-first street because of a notice of a re-duction of $1 per 1,000, have returned to work at the old scale of prices. Holzman & Deutschberger's men also returned to work to-day, the firm having yielded.

The mass-meeting to-night in Cooper

The mass-meeting to-night in Cooper Union to protest against a return to the tenement-house system will be aided by the Central Labor Union, President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor, Fred, Haller and other labor leaders will speak.

Musical Unions at War.

Another war is in progress among the musical unions. The Baire Club has complained to the Miscellaneous Section of the Central Labor Union, to which it is attached, that musicans in the other unions do not live up to the regular scale of prices, and has asked that the Catl Sahm Club and the Progressive Musical Union produce their price lists at the next meeting of the section.

Notes About Workingmen. The Housesmiths' Union installed its new officers last evening at Clarendon Hall.

The Hickory Club, an organization of junior plumbers, met in Cisrendon Hall building last night and installed its new officers.

The Gas-Fitters' Union will meet on Thursday, evening in Stuyeesant Hall, in East Seventeenth street, for the purpose of electing officers of the Beneficiary Fund.

The Journeymen Barbers' Protective Union will give its second annual ball on next Sunday evening in Webster Hall, and not in Tammany Hall, as some of the newspapers have announced.

The employees of Towle & Co., tin can and pail makers, in Burling silp, report that incy have been successful in their strike against a reduction of wages and an attempt to discharge union men.

Another of those interesting meetings of work. Another of those interesting meetings of work-ngwomen will be held in Pythageras Hall this evening. Shorter hours, better wages and more numane treatment are among the objects sought to be obtained.

German Cabinet-Makers' Union No. 7 held a large meeting in Clarendon Hall last night and transacted a large amount of routine business. Work is good with the cabinet-makers generally, according to the shop reports.

District Assembly 64, Knights of Labor, com-this city, has elected Thomas L. Ferris, a plate printer, Master Workman; William G. L. Price, a reporter, Worling Foreman; and Robert Malcolm, a compositor, Treasurer.

"This is a Union Coal Yard" is the legend printed upon a card and distributed by the Boatmen's International Union among coal dealers that may desire them. Union men and friends of organized labor are requested by the boatmen to refrain from patronizing yards where the cards are not distillated. The Carnet-Weavers' Union, United Insurance.

One of the most notable organizations of work-ing people in this city is the Yorkville Protective Association, which holds regular semi-weekly debates on lator and social questions. There are 400 members in the association, and they represent nearly all vocations. Several able young women are members of the organization, and they often join in the debates.

NINETY HORSES BURNED.

Street Railroad Stables Destroyed at Meriden-Animals Roasted in Their Stalls.

(SPECIAL TO THE WORLD, ) MERIDEN, Conn., Jan. 11.-Only eleven of the 101 horses owned by the Meriden Horse Railroad Company were saved from the fire which desiroyed the company's stables about 12 o'clock last night. Many of the animals were very valuable.

Many of the animals were very valuable, and desperate efforts at rescue were made, but all in vain. Within two hours after the flames broke out the buildings were consumed, despite the hard and even heroic work of the Fire Department.

The moans of the dumb animals were pitiful in the extreme, and the scene was an awful one. Most of the horses were incinerated in the stalls, although some could be heard prancing about the barn, uttering wild snorts and screams.

About a dozen cars were destroyed.

The cause of the fire is not yet known.

The cause of the fire is not yet known. The loss is estimated at $100,000.

The Brooklyn Widow Who Was Infatuated With Dr. Richardt.

Mrs. Valentine's Strange Life and Lonely Death.

Her Son Had Been Taken from Her, His Guardians Alleging that His Life Was Not Safe-Her Former Friends to Insist Upon a Rigid Inquiry into the Circumstances of Her Death-A Large Amount of Property at Stake.

VALENTINE.—Mrs. CATHABINE C. VALENTINE of No. 19 East Glat st., city, of profitse pulmonary hemorrhage, produced by grief and consump-tion.

The house is a four-story brown-ston dwelling with an English basement. It is solid, simple and unpretentious, and stands on the north side of the street, a few doors from Central Park. A bow of black and white crape, of the conventional pattern furhished by undertakers, fluttered from the door-bell this morning. In an upper room the body of Mrs. Valentine, thin and wasted by merciless disease, lay in a plain casket, awaiting the arrival of her friends. Two maid servants watched beside the casket, and they were the only living beings in the big house.

Mrs. Valentine was a widow, thirty-nine years old. Her husband was Brewster Valentine, of the firm of Valentine, Bergen & Co., wholesale grocers, at 15 Fulton street, entine, of the firm of Valentine, Bergen & Co., wholesale grocers, at 15 Fuiton street, Brooklyn.

On Monday night, after a day of comparative health, Mrs. Valentine was suddenly seized with hemorrhage of the lungs. She went upstairs alone, but in a moment rang for help. One of her servants summoned Dr. Herman T. Richardt, of 103 East Fiftyninth street. By the time he arrived Mrs. Valentine was beyond help, and within fifteen minutes after the attack she died.

Dr. Richardt reported the case at the Coroner's office, and Denuty Coroner O'Meagher received the remains. But little information could be obtained from the servants, who said that the lady's friends all lived in Brocklyn.

Mary Connors, one of the girls in the house, went to the station-house in Sixtyseventh street, and Sergt. Sealy sent a brief report to Coroner Nugent.

Mrs. Valentine's life had been as strange as her death. There were so many curious circumstances in it that her relatives and former friends will ask the authorities to make a rigid investigation.

Her maiden name was Catharine C. Schoonmaker. Her father was John H. Schoonmaker, who had another daughter, now the wife of Charles H. Joy, a furrier of Erdox, lyn and a son. John H. Schoonmaker, ir.

Catharine became the wife of a Mr. Clarkson, of Flatbush, who died, leaving her some property. Thirteen years ago she was married to Brewster Valentine, who was a widower with one son, William E. Valentine. A year later Ludlow Valentine was born to the couple, and two years after that Brewster Valentine died, leaving property valued at $400,000.

The couple, and two years after that Brewster Valentine died, leaving property valued at $400,000.

Mr. Valentine was the senior member of the firm, his partners being George W. Valentine and George P. Bergen.

The married life of Mr. Valentine and his wife had not been of the most pleasant description, and he left his property peculiarly. His infant son received $15,000 outright, and $100,000 was left in trust for the use of the widow, who received $4,000 per annum from it. To William B. Valentine, the son of William Edgar Gladson and grandson of Brewster Valentine, was left $200,000.

On the death of Mrs. Valentine $50,000 of the $100,000 in trust was to go to this grandson and $50,000 to Ludlow. Should Ludlow die first his mother was to receive in her own name this $50,000.

die first his mother was to receive in her own name this $50,000.

Mrs. Valentine had considerable property of her own including the $15,000 house in which they lived, at the corner of Cranberr and Willow streets, Brooklyn.

Mrs. Valentine's parents are aged people, and they and her young brother were dependent upon her for support. They lived with her in the Cranberry street house until Dr. Herman T. Richardt, a Brooklyn physician began to visit her.

She and Dr. Richardt became very good friends—too good friends, her parents

She and Dr. Richardt became very good friends—too good friends, her parents thought, for Dr. Richardt had a wife and two children, and they considered that he was too attentive to the wealthy young widow.

The parents protested, and in 1883 Mrs. Valentine told them that they must go away and stay at least fifty miles away from Brooklyn, under penalty of losing assistance from her.

to live. But the mother returned to Brooklyn to see her son, and Mrs. Valentine, learning of the visit, cut off the allowance she had ing of the visit, cut off the allowance she had made her mother.

The law was called into play for the protection of the aged mother, and County Judge Moore, of Brookiyn, directed that Mrs. Valentine pay $12 a week to her mother. This was in 1884. In the same year the infatuated widow deeded her Cranberry street residence to Dr. Richardt.

Hearing of this, George W. Bergen, one of the executors of Mr. Valentine's will, instituted proceedings on behalf of the son. Ludlow, to set aside the deed, and Dr. Richardt capitulated, transferring the property back to the widow. But in 1885 she again transferred the property to Dr. Richardt and moved over to the bouse in Sixty-first street soon after. Dr. Richardt's office was not far off.

soon after. Dr. Richardt's office was not far off.

Meantime, in 1884, application was made to Surrogate Jacob 1. Bergen, of Brooklyn, for the appointment of guardians for the boy, Ludlow Valentine.

Among the allegations made in the papers served by Horace Secor, ir., counsel for the executors and trustees, George W. Bergen and Elias Lewis, ir., President of the Brooklipn Bank, upon ex-Judge Fullerton, whe was retained by Mrs. Valentine, were those; That Mrs. Valentine was holding illicit relations with Dr. Herman T. Richardt; that Dr. Richardt had an undue influence over her; that the life of the lad might be endangered by the machinations of Dr. Richardt, ims. much as in, case of the boy's death $50,000 would go to his mother, and as she had deeded to Dr. Richardt her $15,000 house in Brooklyn, Dr. Richardt might, by his influence over her, get the lad's $50,000 also; and that she was a person unfit to have the care the child.

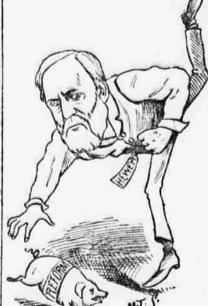

The case as heard by Surrogate Bergen covers about five hundred printed octavo

The case as heard by Surrogate Bergen covers about five hundred printed octavo pages. Dr. Richardt was rudely handled in the proceedings, and the result was that the child was taken from the mother and placed in the care of Messrs, Bergen and Lewis as guardians.

They sent the boy to the Polyteenic School in Brooklyn, and he has been there ever since. This is probably the subject of the "grief" which it is alleged in the

The twelve-year-old boy will now receive the $50,000 due him from his father's estate, but much interest is felt among her friends as to the spoostion Mrs. Valentine has made of her own independent property.

Lawyer Secor openly expressed a suspicion of foul play to-day. He had a consultation with G. W. Bergen this morning and will see that the circumstances of Mrs. Valentine's death are thoroughly investigated.

The second deed of the Cranberry street house given by Mrs. Valentine to Dr. Richard will be boked after and steps will be taken immediately to have it set aside.

Coroner's Physician O'Meagher said this afternoon that he made as careful a diagnosis of the case as was possible without an autopsy. From the state of the woman's lungs, her general emaciated appearance and the statement of the servant girl, Mary O'Connor, he was of the opinion that death resulted from hemorrhage caused by chronic pheumonia.

The cirl said to him that Mrs. Valentine pheumonia.

The girl said to him that Mrs. Valentine had been losing flesh and growing feebler every day for fifteen months, and for the past week or two has been raising blood.

Dr. Richardt was present when she died, as were also Dr. Willy Meyer, of 105 East Fifty-ninth street, and Dr. Wilson Peterson, of 658 Madison avenue.

Dr. O'Meagher did not examine Dr. Richardt has to his course of treatment of the patient.

He said that if there were any suspicious cir-cumstances in the case Coroner Nugent will order an autopsy, when the stomach will be examined.

A Story of " Little Italy."

PASQUALE MORINO

POLICE CAPTAIN WEBB. Formerly of the Oak Street, now of the Delancey

rino. No theory that was advanced in regard to it was at all satisfactory, and the only one which seemed any way plausible had weak points in it. Pasquale was an Italian ragpicker. He was a low-browed, heavyooking fellow, with a little black mustache, black eyes, and large teeth, very white and regular. He was married to a handsome girl who was a bit of a shrew. The neighbors used to bear them talking away in Italian to each other in the hurried, declamatory way that Italians have, but they never got as far as blows. They lived in one of the tenement-houses near Mulberry street, in "Little Italy." It was a big six-story house which stood in the rear of another, the exact counterpart of it.

A little court, paved with blue flags, was beween the two houses. The stones were dark and greasy. The fire-escape landings were occupied with different goods, according to the taste of the family that lived within. In two or three there were withered-looking flowers, or rather plants, because they seldom bloomed. They didn't get the right kind of nourishment out of the mephitic air that rose between the two houses.

On Pasquale's balcony was a grimy old nattress and a dingy coverlid was flung over the rail. In the summer nights Pasquale used to throw himself down here and go to sleep under the sky. Several of his male neighbors passed the night so. He found it cooler than in the stuffy room, which was dirty and full of an unhealthy smell. Mme. Pasquale used to do washing, but she had her tub in the little court, where four or five other women were near by with their tubs. It was more sociable for them to was their tongues together while they swashed the linen round in the soap-suds and wrung it. There lived in the same building down on the first floor another Italian who was a musician. He ground an organ and pulled a shock that has been felt for years.

Citizens rushed out of their houses in their night clothes terrified and half asleep, not that he could clamber up over the blinds or door-posts and show his ugly face at the winlows on the second floor, as he held out his dingy sed cap.

DISCOVERED BY PASQUALE.

The name of the monkey's master was Giovanni Scalza. He was a much better looking fellow than Pasquale, who had, as I say, a low-browed, sulky expression. When Glovanni came home in the evening after making the round of the street, he would count up his pennies, tie them up in an old sock which he kept hid in his mattress, stack his organ in the corner, fasten the mankey in the basement and go up to the Morinos', He didn't go so much for Pasquale's sake as he did for Mme. Chiara's. He liked to talk showed up on some day of bad luck in the ragpicking business, he wasn't received with the most hospitable delight. Still, Giovanni didn't give him much that he could find fault with, and so long as Chiara was sociabie didn't mind Pasquale's grumpiness. But one evening when Pasquale had been at a cheap hash house in the neighborhood and had "filled up" on beer, he came home, climbed up the narrow, dark wooden stairs, and when he opened the door saw the elegant Giovanni holding Chiara in his arms, kissing her! His wife's face was turned towards the door and she saw her husband. She pushed Giovanni away and called him a fool in Italian. But she didn't seem so very angry. fresh to brisk scenterly after all.

Pasquale was mad enough for both. He had been feeling pretty jealous over Giovanni's visits to his wife, but there was nothing
